—The indications are that Orange Noble will be left by a large majority.

—There are some things money cannot do. It may buy a man his nomination for office, but Orange Noble will find that it won't elect him.

—The Secretaryship of the Treasury has been tendered to Chief Judge Folger of New York. Whether he will accept is not yet known.

—Ex-Governor Morgan was appointed Secretary of the Treasury, and confirmed, but has declined the office on account of his advanced age and ill health.

—Orange Noble, the Democratic candidate for State Treasurer, was a Know Nothing in the palm days of that organization, and no Democratic paper dares deny it.

—How do Irishmen and Germans, belonging to the Democratic party, relish voting for the former Know Nothing, Orange Noble, for Treasurer of this Commonwealth.

—Next week, being the closing week of the canvass, promises to be one of great activity in all parts of the State. The Republican cause steadily strengthens, and the prospect for General Baily's election brightens.

—Bristol Democrats are not enthusiastic over their State ticket. When a rich man is nominated, simply because he is a rich man, the masses don't enthuse until a portion of the contents of the barrel is placed "where it will do the most good."

—The nomination of Bookwalter, of Ohio, was a parallel case to that of Orange Noble. Both were nominated on account of the barrel. Bookwalter is a renegade Republican. So is Noble. Bookwalter was snowed under by a lack of nearly 25,000 votes, and so will it be with Noble. Poor Bookwalter! Poor Noble!

—It is evident to the Pottsville Miners' Journal that Mr. Wolfe is endowed with a talent for mediocrity that would put Munchausen, Tom Pepper and Ananias to the blush, or else he is so infatuated with a mistaken idea of his own importance as to imagine that the very operations of nature are conducted solely with reference to himself.

—The Democratic outcry against an alleged Republican ring is a very disinterested one. It is caused only by a desire to benefit the Republican party. The Democrats wouldn't lift a little finger to injure the Republican party. They are entirely too good and have the interests of the Republicans too much at heart to harbor such intentions.

—Orange Noble, the present Democratic candidate for State Treasurer, was before the Democratic convention that assembled in Erie, in 1875, for the nomination of State Treasurer then. He failed to get the nomination and bolted, and afterward supported the Republican candidate. How do our Democratic citizens relish swallowing a bolt? How do they like to support a man who is only a Democrat for the sake of obtaining an office? Time will tell.

—It appears that Orange Noble, who is a millionaire, was nominated because he had money. What brains he has was not taken into consideration. He is also the President of a National Bank at Erie. Think of that, ye Democrats, who are howling continually about the danger the country is in from the National Banks, and then step meekly up to the polls and put in your little ballot for Orange Noble the Know Nothing, the renegade Republican, the bolting Democrat, the bloated bondholder, and the National Bank president. Put it in—and squirm.

—The Democratic newspapers, with rare exceptions, are very reticent about the political antecedents of their candidate for State Treasurer. They prefer to keep from the rank and file the knowledge that Orange Noble was Know Nothing, a bolter from the Democratic convention, and an assistant Republican, who worked hard for the election of Henry Rowle, the Republican nominee for State Treasurer. But the light must shine and show the man in his true colors, and the Erie Herald, a staunch Democratic paper, exposes Noble's infidelity to the Democratic party. The Herald is published at Orange Noble's home and is fully acquainted with that gentleman's political career.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22, 1881.
EDITOR GAZETTE:—The weather has been variable and terribly trying to delicate constitutions. The fluctuations of the temperature have been great. One day would be as bright and as balmy as spring, while the next would be as oppressively uncomfortable as any morning in July, and to give variety to be followed by a day, the milder frost of which would cause one to button up his coat, and to walk briskly to keep warm. The drought is unprecedented, and its effect has caused the Commissioners of Public Works to issue several special notices, to prevent a complete water famine, and to reserve sufficient water for extinguishing fires and supplying factories. The hydrants for supplying man and beast have been shut off. The drives in Central Park are no longer sprinkled, and areas, side-walks, windows and house-fronts can no longer be washed by means of the private hose. We must have heavy rains before long or suffer.

On yesterday afternoon our great thoroughfare presented a gala appearance. The Seventh Regiment marched down Broadway to Governor Long, of Massachusetts and his military escort, on their way home from the Yorktown celebration. Afterwards a reception was held at the new armory, where tables were spread, speeches were made, and general good cheer prevailed.

Another speculative individual named John Stephens, Jr. has caused a commotion in financial circles, by the facility with which he has been able to sign other persons names, and sell the forged notes to credulous dealers. Several banks have been swindled in this way, and they are now trying to make a settlement with the relatives of the dishonest man, and get out with as little loss as possible. The amount of forgeries is not less than $100,000, and will probably exceed that sum. Stephens has long been the buyer for three large grocery houses in the west, and his standing in the business community was excellent, hence the ease with which he sold the spurious paper.

The Rev. Henry Ward Beecher has been creating another stir in Brooklyn. This time it is a political war, by advocating on the stump the claims of a Republican candidate for Mayor, in opposition to Gen. Tracy, one of the Plymouth pastor's lawyers in the notorious case of Tilton vs. Beecher. To Gen. Tracy's commanding influence in and knowledge of Brooklyn courts, it is said Mr. Beecher is largely indebted for the termination of that unpleasant suit, and his appearance at this time against him is unfavorably commented on. But Beecher, with all his ability, is always making mistakes, and this one makes but a small addition to a long list.

An interesting suit in the Brooklyn courts has just been settled, and the identity of an unacknowledged son has been established. The case was full of romance. The defendant, Rev. George C. Pennell, is about fifty years of age, and has been for twenty years a popular Episcopal divine. The story in brief is as follows: In April, 1852, this clergyman was clandestinely married to his cousin, Miss Mary Schreveppel, of Schreveppelville, N. Y., and in June of the same year a son was born to them, who was at once taken away by Dr. Pennell, his grandfather and the young wife and mother believing the child to be dead, resumed her maiden name, returned to her home, and was considered a single woman to the day of his death, which occurred five or six years ago. The son in the meantime had been christened Robert Crosby, and grew to manhood in the house of a Brooklyn family. Miss Schreveppel was worth a considerable amount of property, which in entire ignorance of the existence of her child, she bequeathed to relatives and charitable institutions. Before she died she confided to Ex-Attorney General Pratt the story of her clandestine marriage, and it is to his exertions that the young man is indebted for unraveling the mystery that has surrounded him. The Rev. Pennell is silent on the subject of this former marriage, and well he may be, for he has for many years been the father of another family, who reside with him in the wealthy parish over which he presides in Newark, N. J.

A singular strike was begun on Wednesday in Lorillard's tobacco factory in Jersey City. Five hundred girls stopped work and to this day have refused to resume, because their foreman, a young, handsome and clever fellow had been discharged and an older, and more exacting man had been put in his place. The girls are determined, and threaten to pull the hair and scratch the eyes of any other help that may presume to take their places. By their action 200 male employees of the factory were obliged to stop work for want of material.

On Monday there was another Fenian scare among the English steamship companies, when it was announced that the Cunard steamer Boothia had been set on fire by two strangers who had visited the vessel. They had scattered some kind of liquid upon the carpet in the saloon and passage ways, which ignited when trodden upon. Although the fire burned briskly for a while, it was soon subdued and no great damage resulted; but it has served to intimidate the wealthy who were contemplating Europe in trips, and it is likely that passenger lists for some little time to come will not be as full as usual in consequence.

The Vanderbilt mansions do not appear to be any nearer completion than they were a year ago, although a small army of workmen are employed. But Cornelius Vanderbilt's fine horses took possession of their gorgeous new stable yesterday, and walked to their stalls over expensively carpeted floors. The stable is regal in appointment. The interior is like a temple, in which the galleries are used as hay lofts, and the stalls are where the best horses might have been. Stained glass darken the windows, and over them are drawn fringed curtains, which makes the light as soft and mellow as the inside of some old cathedral. Pictures are on the walls, while costly figures of different designs grace various niches. It is in all respects worthy the ownership of a man who ranks as oldest son of the possessor of one hundred million dollars.

LAURENCE.

THE MEADE MONUMENT.

Exhibition of Designs Submitted for an Equestrian Statue in Fairmount Park.

The designs submitted in competition for the proposed equestrian statue of General Meade have been arranged for exhibition in Philadelphia. The Times of Saturday says: "The models are fifteen in number, the most of them about two feet in height, and presenting a strong family likeness as they are ranged around the room. These fifteen plaster horses, lightly stepping or gaily caroling, with nicely curving necks and flowing manes, and fifteen plaster riders of more or less heroic aspect, do not arouse the spectator to an ardent admiration of the genius of the sculptors who were tempted to compete for the association's prize. It is, perhaps, unnecessary to say that few of the names appended to the models are known to fame. It may be added that few of these models give indication that fame will ever be the portion of their authors. Various as are the degrees of incompetence they display, scarcely any of them rise upon the dullest commonplace, and so nearly equal are they in this respect that it is a wonder how the association or the committee, or whoever made the selection, was able to pick out three more commonplace than the rest with to award the prizes. There are a few of the designs that indicate effort at originality, but most of these bear no evident relation to the professed purpose, a portrait of General Meade. There is an odd little sketch, for example, stuck away in a corner, that suggests Napoleon crossing the Alps, or St. George and the dragon, or some other heroic fancy, that would be absurd enough as a statue of this quiet, self-contained soldier, yet it does have the merit of a life of its own. Another small model represents a Texan ranger coursing over the plains upon his pony, not badly expressed, but quite out of the present competition. The model that does show an intelligent effort to incorporate in a portrait statue some definite idea, some original thought, is that which represents Meade turning in his saddle and resting his right hand, holding his cap, upon the launch of his horse, while with his left hand he draws quickly on the bridle. There is a great deal of force in this figure and the horse is fairly modelled. If not altogether good it is certainly a nearer approach to something of value than either of the three prize essays.

"Mr. Calder's design, to which the first prize is awarded, is very carefully modeled and elaborately finished. The horse is in a conventional posture and the rider sits erect in his saddle, in his best uniform, with sword and sash and buttons and field-glass complete. It is a perfectly harmless statue, but the world would never make pilgrimages to look upon it. Mr. Baily's model has been seen before under various names. In fact he sends samples of his two styles, with the horse in motion, and with the horse at rest. The committee has preferred the latter. It is very dull, though it shows a certain technical facility which makes its dullness preferable to that of Mr. Lansing's model, which is given the third prize. Among those that remain, various degrees of dullness, of positive badness, or of absurdity may be observed. There is one very funny one with a genius of some sort offering a wreath to a sick looking little man on a wooden horse, and another in which the alleged General Meade is mounted upon a gouty animal that suggests the fabled pook. Taking them as they run, the three selected are possibly as good as any other three, but none of them suggest a statue upon which it would be at all worth while to expend the money which the association has collected."

—Since the inauguration of the signal service system on the Pacific coast great attention has been paid the reports there by farmers and all interested in grain production, and also by shipmasters, the latter especially when outward bound. The great distance of Washington makes it difficult to give them accurately for the western coast, and it seems to the Alta Californian that the signal service department, by establishing at San Francisco a central station for the Pacific coast, having at its head an official thoroughly posted in the details of the service, would make it possible to determine with accuracy not only the approach of bad weather, but all other necessary items which have made the service system famous. There are already on the coast about twelve stations, well distributed, from which tri-daily reports are received, touching all the details necessary in making up weather prognostications. "Nothing is lacking to make the Pacific coast service thoroughly efficient, save the presence of an able and trustworthy officer as manager," says the Alta.

—The Cameron county Press says: "Orange Noble, the Democratic candidate for State Treasurer, is a renegade Republican. A few years ago, when Cameron county was in the Erie district, Noble aspired to go to Congress, and because the people preferred Judge Schofield, who had long and ably represented the district in Congress, he got mad and went over to the Democracy. Had Noble then been nominated and elected by the Republicans he would undoubtedly be a Republican still, but our party preferring to be represented by brains rather than money, he went where his barrel would be appreciated, and that's why Noble became a Democrat."

—The West Chester Republican thinks that "the people who are not satisfied should be. The people who are should give their united support to their chosen candidate, General Baily. And the Republican party should elect him and do itself credit, redeem its pledges and subserve the best interests of the government, which is of the people and for the people."

For State Treasurer,
Gen. Silas M. Baily.

A man who from his youth up, has fought the battles of Republicanism in a region where no hope of success could add vigor and zeal to the contest, and with no reward save the consciousness of having served the cause he loved.

A man who has attested his love of liberty and law, by service on the field of glory and blood, who won his promotion in the glorious Pennsylvania Reserves, from Captain to Brigadier, by meritorious service on the field.

A man who stood in the red hell of battle at Drainesville, on the Peninsula, at Gaines' Mill, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, and the Wilderness, and who bore witness with his blood, that he loved his country well.

He bears upon his person the rough scars left by the cruel cannon ball, and will carry to his grave the evidence of his patriotism and courage.

He is able, and worthy to lead Republicans to Victory as he led his regiment to war.—Speech of Attorney General Palmer in Republican State Convention.

JAMES ABRAHAM GARFIELD.

For the historian, whose task it shall be to chronicle the more important episodes of the first century of our national existence, there can be none more touching or more thoroughly dramatic, than that in which the illustrious martyr whose name heads this article is the central and most conspicuous figure. Without the prestige to exalted birth; destitute of wealth and its multitudinous concomitants, this "Youth to fortune and to fame unknown," fostered by the genius of institutions which "In every soldier's knapsack places the materials for a Marshal's baton," and sustained by a fixedness of purpose and a self-reliance most exceptional, "Out of the prison of his mean estate," reared a personality of such distinguished excellence, as must respond to the honor of his country and his own undying glory. In the contemplation of a character so grand, of an individuality so amiable and so supremely catholic, our hearts beat with accelerated impulse, and our souls fill with pleasurable emotion.

A career, fortunate only in that he was enabled to combat and overcome the most unusual vicissitudes—the most adverse of possible perplexities. A career which, in all its mutations, is unsullied by a single blemish. Without fear, without favor, swerving neither to the right nor the left,

"Like to the Punic sea,
Whose reef, current, and compass course
No man has taught, but keeps the sea on."

A youth of labor, of penury, of struggle most intense; a manhood noble, dignified, and whether on the field or in the forum, alike admirable, beautiful and perfect. While not at all times escaping the undeserved censure of faction, and the calumny born of envy and malice, he was enabled to live it down. He assuredly, of the bright galaxy of earth's immortals, might with the scholar of Beaumont and Fletcher truly say, "The wings on which my soul is mounted, have long since borne it too high to stoop to any prey, that soars not upward."

In that impartial and critical balance in which we are accustomed to estimate men, we find him, in every sense, pure and good, in the various and exacting relations of life, whether as son, husband, father or citizen, we find him superlatively perfect. "The story of his death is enrolled in the history,"—the lesson of his life, let us hope, reposes in the heart of his countrymen. Thus, O' historian, "The noblest Roman of them all."

ADOLPH ANCKER.

FOR POLISHING FURNITURE.—Take two ounces of brown sugar, and half an ounce of alcohol, mix them together in a mortar, and melt, take it off the fire, and add two ounces of spirits of wine, and half a pint of spirits of turpentine. Rub it up with a woolen cloth and polish it with a clean silk cloth.

COCKROACHES can be destroyed by using smooth-glazed china bowls, partially filled with molasses and water. Set the bowls against something by which the insects can get in; they will not be able to get out.

TO DRIVE RATS AWAY.—Fill the rat-holes with well slaked lime; repeat it a second time if necessary. It affects them in such a manner that they soon leave, very seldom requiring a repetition of the dose.

THE TEA-KETTLE.—Many experienced housekeepers, in order to prevent the formation of rust in the tea-kettle, keep an oyster shell in it. The shell attracts all the stony particles to itself.

TO CLEANSE DRAW MATTING.—Draw matting may be cleaned with a large, coarse cloth, dipped in salt and water, and then wiped dry. The salt prevents the straw from turning yellow.

TO DESTROY ANTS.—A strong solution of carbolic acid and water poured into holes kills all the ants it touches, and the survivors immediately take themselves off.

FROST STAINS.—Freezing will take out all old fruit stains, and scalding with boiling water will remove those that have never been through the wash.

STAINED BRASS.—Whiting wet with aqua ammonia will cleanse brass from stains, and is excellent for polishing faucets and door-knobs of brass or silver.

TO RESTORE A FADED CARPET.—Dip the carpet in strong salt and water. Blue factory cotton or blue lambswool will not be so if dipped in salt water while they are new.

TO RESTORE RUSTY BLACK GOODS.—A teaspoonful of spirits of ammonia added to the rinse-water will make rusty black goods look as good as new.

KEROSENE LAMPS, if kept full, will never explode, as there is no room in the lamp when it is full for the accumulation of explosive gas.

TO IMPROVE PICKLES.—Pieces of horseradish added to the vinegar on pickles improves their flavor and prevents mould.

ANTI-MICE REMEDY.—Camphor placed in drawers or trunks will prevent mice from doing the contents any injury.

IF YOUR FINE-IRON is rough rub them with fine salt and it will make them perfectly smooth.

PRESERVING AUTUMN LEAVES.—One of the great fancies of this season has been for autumn leaves, which are used in various methods, the most popular being, perhaps, to dry them flat and carefully, and take great care to preserve their stalks. When thoroughly dry, they are varnished with "Canada balsam varnish," which gives them a pretty gloss, and also acts as a preservative to them from all insects and moths. After this, they are carefully laid aside for the decoration of the winter dinner-table, and may be most safely preserved in a tin box, with a well-fitting cover. Grasses added to them are very effective, and when dry they may be dried at home with a good stove. They may be also frosted when dry, by dipping each stalk into a solution of alum and leaving them to dry upright. With the grasses and leaves may be used the dried everlasting flowers and the prepared moss, but I must warn my readers that no little taste is needed in their arrangement to avoid the least heaviness of effect. I have found that glass vases and stands are the most effective for their arrangement, as the transparency of these increases the wished for lightness and grace. Another way of using the dried leaves is for the ornamentation of tables, blotting-books or boxes. Old cigar cases, when stained black, are very favorite articles for decoration; but now we know the value of varnished unpainted wood, I fancy that the cigar boxes unpainted, with the unvarnished leaves gummed on, and the box and leaves varnished afterward. If, however, a black ground be especially desired, use "Brunswick black" and turpentine mixed, to make a rich-looking brown ground. Then gum on the leaves in a central group, being careful to cut away with a sharp pair of scissors, all the under parts of the leaves, which will be hidden by others above, as too many thicknesses of leaf will make an uneven surface, and give an ugly appearance to the work when finished.—Ladies' Gazette of Fashion.

A gentleman had his curiosity aroused, while the trees were covered thickly with ice, as to the relative weight of the ice and wood it surrounded. So he cut off a limb and found that it weighed two and three-quarter pounds; after the ice was melted it weighed two ounces. Two hours later another trial was made, and first the limb weighed four and one-half pounds; after the ice was removed it weighed three ounces. Another trial showed a weight of thirty-two pounds, while the limb alone weighed two pounds, making thirty pounds of ice.

Some of the railway trains in Nova Scotia are not lightning trains. On one of them the engineer whistled "down brakes." "What is the trouble, conductor?" asked a passenger. "Cow on the track," coolly responded the conductor. "The man was satisfied. Shortly afterward the train stopped. "What's the trouble now?" cried the passenger. "Cow on the track," was the reply. "What?" said the man, "haven't we caught up with that cow yet?"

Of the late Dean Stanley it is said that his sermons were sometimes felt to be a trifle too secular. A dignitary of the English Church went one Sunday to the Abbey to hear the Dean preach. How did you like the sermon? asked the lady with whom he was seated. "Oh," was the reply, "it was very good; there was nothing to object to; but it was not what I went to hear. I went to hear about the way to heaven, and I only heard about the way to Palestine."

Nantucket is a place where women are not entirely ignored. They outnumber the men six to one. The post of flagman at the railway crossing is acceptably filled by a woman, as are many other posts of our coast subscribers. This was a fair question, and we answer, that we are reliably informed, that a gentleman of this city who has suffered untold agony, and spent a mint of money to get relief from Rheumatism, in desperation bought some and tried it, and declares that it is the best remedy for Rheumatism he ever heard of.

California papers are now able to report a surplus of the present year's crop amounting to 10,000,000 bushels, and there is left over from last year 12,850,000 cents of wheat, making a total of superior wheat to be exported this fall and winter to Europe of 37,000,000 bushels.
